Which of the following statements is TRUE about the Patent Applications?

1. An applicant can directly file separate patent applications in different countries in which he/she would like to protect the invention, only consecutively, after the earlier application is approved and patent is granted in the country of earlier application.
2. An applicant can file a patent application in a Paris Convention country, and then file separate patent applications in other Paris Convention countries within 18 months from the filing date of that first patent application.
3. An applicant can file a patent application under the PCT and then after the end of the PCT procedure, usually at 30 months from the earliest filing date, pursue the grant of patents directly before the National Patent Offices of the countries in which he/she wants to obtain the patent.
4. An applicant can seek patent protection for an invention simultaneously in many countries by filing a single "international" patent application under PCT instead of filing several separate national or regional patent applications, and the patent is granted by the WIPO for all the convention countries of PCT.
