Case Study - 45 to 49 (Question Id - 96)

Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow:

India's "interest in the Central Asia comes from a mixture of politico-strategic concerns, and perhaps to a lesser extent, perceived commercial prospects". India's initial reaction to the newly independent states of Central Asia, was like China's, largely defensive in nature. The rapid growth of Pakistan's, Iran's and Turkey's influence in Central Asia generated a growing concern and resentment in Indian nationalist circles. The Indian political elites saw Pakistan's rapid rapprochement in Central Asia as an attempt to establish a bloc of Islamic states. Anthony Hyman argues that some Indian political elites interpreted the independence of the Central Asian states "in an alarmist fashion, as a highly unwelcome strengthening of Pakistan's regional position, with five potential new allies". Of particular note were the reports claiming Pakistan had acquired enriched uranium from Tajikistan and Kazakhstan, while India's own efforts to acquire the same material from Kyrgyzstan, under International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) safeguards, had languished. However, Indian nationalists and media discussions and reporting largely overplayed fear of a new Muslim fundamentalist belt.
