Read the following letter addressed to Ann Landers quoted in Lakoff (1990) and answer the question:

Dear Ann Landers,

"My husband recently ran for public office. He went to the local radio station to record an ad to be read on the air. The copy was written by someone at the station.

One of the sentences was, "Me and my family will be moving to this town." When I heard it on the air, I was shocked. My husband said, "That's the way they wrote it. It didn't sound right to me, either."

I immediately went to the station and challenged them. They said, "You are wrong." We then telephoned a graduate of Northwestern University who was an English major. He said it could be either "I" or "me".

Am I an ignoramus? I was taught to diagram sentences when in doubt. It comes out, "Me will be moving." Does this sound like correct English to you? Please settle it".
